"I really don't see why of all places, I had to move to Mexico."

"_New Mexico,"_

Kagome glared as the voice on the other end of the phone corrected her. While many may think she was talking to a close friend, or maybe even her mother or brother, no. She was having a conversation with her caretaker. "My bad, _New_ Mexico," she received looks from the people at the airport, most of them looked to be leaving, some had gotten off of her flight, but out of those people, only a few were Japanese like her, so she flipped her _language _flip and started talking in Japanese. "I just don't get why I couldn't stay in Japan..."

"_Until you pass your High School education, you will stay there. Besides, you wanted to be away from my idiot brother, and he hates it down there."_

"InuYasha hates it in New Mexico?" She scoffed, "can't imagine why. I've been here for thirty minutes and I'm already partial to buying a ticket back home myself."

"_With what funds?"_

Kagome frowned, "Point. But I am still lost as to why New Mexico. There is absolutely_ nothing_ here." She glanced around both ways and sighed, "Nothing,"

"_I'm sure that you'll have fun, Kagome. I have a colleague down there in Albuquerque, you'll be staying with his two kids. If I recall, they are both your age."_

"So...that means what to me? We can bond over the fact that I'm staying in their house and we all have birthdays in the same year?"

"_This Sesshoumaru does not like that tone, Miko. It's not my fault that you have a no attendance accepted BOLO in every school in Japan."_

Kagome put her hand in her pocket and sighed, _'No...that's my fault, if I hadn't shattered the Jewel, I wouldn't have been running all across Edo Japan trying to find all the pieces and stop an evil half breed spider demon. I feel as if that should all be filed under Extra Credit. It's not like I was goofing off, I nearly died like fifteen times...more!_'_ she shaking her head, she noted a man walking towards her, a sign in his hand as he motioned towards it. "Kagame Higurashi?" She laughed, "Sorry, wrong person."

"_Miko,"_

She rolled her eyes and flipped her phone shut, successfully hanging up on the man on the other end of the line. She stood up as the man looked curiously between the sign and her, "you spelt my name wrong...K-A-G-O-M-E...Kagome."

He blushed, "apologies young Miss, Mr. Evans sent your name via _text_ and I guess accidentally spelt it wrong. Japanese names are known to be autocorrected."

She understood that well enough, "so, what's your name? Or, what should I call you?"

"Thomas Fulton, you can call me Thomas or Mr. Fulton, either is acceptable."

"Thomas is okay?" She took the handle of her bag and shouldered a large yellow backpack that looked as if it had been part of the Vietnam War.

"Yes ma'am, here...let me take your bags."

Kagome shook her head, "thanks, but I'm a big girl. I can carry my own things." She smiled at him and started to walk, waiting for him to catch up as he shook his shock off and led her to the car.

"This way," he ushered her towards a Lexus RX 2016, opening the hatchback, he helped her place her suitcase in the back but she refused to put her yellow backpack with her suitcase. He gave in and opened the back seat door, helping her in and watching as she put her bag on the ground by her feet.

"The ride will be a bit over an hour, my apologies, Miss."

"That's fine, thanks for picking me up." She sat down and watched the scenery fly by, taking in the trees that passed her and the surprisingly beautiful open land, the rocky ledges of a spiraling road, and she realized after an hour of watching houses pass her by, that she wasn't going to any of the Hotels or Houses Thomas had driven past. None of the neighborhoods, or any of the apartments, she was heading to what looked more like a resort. "Where are we going, Thomas?"

"Lava Springs, it's Summer Vacation for the Evan Siblings, and that means they're spending it at the Country Club."

Kagome nodded, "_...are they rich or something? I shouldn't ask that,_" she watched the gates open and the car came to a stop next to a bright pink Mustang. Her eyes couldn't possibly get any larger, the license plate read FABULUS and where the cars insignia would normally go, there was the Initials SE and then another SE was on the hood of the car. "...oh, wow...what drives that."

Thomas gave a breathy laugh, one that emitted no sense of humor whatsoever. "That would be Miss. Evans car,"

"Mrs. Evans the _mom_ or Miss. Evans the _daughter_?"

"The daughter,"

"Is she blonde too? This looks like a toy car from a Barbie Dream House."

"Yes, actually...she is Blonde...oh, and there she is. Try and get along, Miss. Kagome."

Nodding, she opened the door and climbed out before Thomas could get the door for her. The blonde walked straight past her and up to Thomas, who was trying to get himself together.

"Where were you Fulton, I called the resort trying to get ahold of you, and you were off premises? Why?!"

"I apologize, Miss. Evans. Mr. Evans..." he gave an incline of his head to someone even Kagome hadn't noticed yet. He was leaning against a red rock formation in front of the building. "I had other business to attend to."

"What's more important than being _here_!?"

Kagome cleared her throat, "he was picking me up."

"Oh...!" Sharpay smiled, giving a little laugh she walked over to Kagome, "I asked what was more _important_...not what was his _excuse_. Fulton!"

"Miss. Evans, I advise you think carefully to how you treat the Young Miss, your father gave me _strict_ instructions that she's treated like a _Queen_. I do hope you get my point..._Princess_."

"Fulton, are you telling me that your priorities are to this...this..."

Kagome smiled, "I accept 'girl, woman, female, and young lady' but I'm partial to my name too, which, in case you were wondering, is Kagome."

"...aah!" The blonde girl stormed off, _"Ryan!"_

Kagome looked back to the brother, who was smiling at her before he walked off after his sister who had yelled out his name. "...Ryan and...?"

"Sharpay Evans...the Evan siblings." He sighed, "I will no doubt hear about this later."

"Wasn't it her father who told you to pick me up?"

"Oh, that matters little, the Evan's are a particular breed of humans who believe that I can literally be in ten places at once while standing on my head still serving them tea."

"Can you?" she laughed.

A smile forming on his lips at the girl beside him, "if I have to."

"I'm fine, really, thank you but-" Kagome waved her hands as she gave up talking to one of the maids in her room. Standing, she left and chose instead to explore the Lave Springs country club. Being told by Fulton earlier that day that she had access to everything, fully paid for by Mr. Evans, she figured she might as well take full advantage of the offer. And of course, how best to explore, than to grab her sneakers, her yellow backpack, a snack and to head off into the nearest cave or forest, possibly even scale a mountain?

"Oh, and where am I going to find a forest or mountain to scale..." Kagome laughed as she shouldered her backpack. Rounding a corner only to run smack dab into someone else. "Gomen!" She bowed, apologizing in Japanese without even thinking about her location or the fact that the guy in front of her had no earthly idea what she had just said. Until she straightened up and saw Ryan staring at her blankly, completely baffled by what she had just done.

"What did you say?" He asked.

She frowned, before realizing that she had apologized in her native language, "I said Sorry,"

"And then you bowed to me, careful you don't do that to Sharpay, her ego may expand more what it already has."

Kagome smiled, shaking her head as she walked past him. She was going to just keep on towards wherever, but Ryan was following her. "Was there something you needed?" She stopped walking and turned to face him.

"Not really, it's just..." he smiled, "I heard you say something about a mountain or forest..."

"You know of one?"

"..." he held his arm out to her and smiled, "let me escort you, I'll give you the grand tour."

She wasn't sure why she had given into the adorable smile, or the polite charm, but she placed her hand on his bicep and let him guide her down the hall and out of the inn that they were staying in over summer break. Taking her to a nearby golf cart, they stopped when a high pitched voice called out his name. "Your sister seems very..." Kagome stopped, not wanting to insult his sister, since Ryan was going out of his way to show her around.

"Rude? Needy? Loud?" Ryan listed a few words that came to mind.

"Controlling..."

"And much more," he watched his sister storm up to them, her eyes narrowed on the girl by his side, but she shook her head and her hair splayed out in her irritation. "Sharpay, you seem mad."

"Oh, I'm not mad...I'm furious!" She stepped up to Kagome, "I did pay my mother a visit, Daddy sadly will not be available until a bit later, but hear me well _new girl_...I don't like you, and if I don't like you, that pretty much means your whole school life will _suck_! I promise you that much."

Kagome frowned, "I didn't ask for you to like me, nor do I care if you do or don't. Sadly for you, I don't validate my existence on whether or not somebody likes me. Really, you should find another way to let off your aggression, try Archery, or Meditation, I find both work well for me...maybe even a little sword play?" Kagome bluffed the last part, she knew only the basics with a sword, and wasn't up for any swordfights, now or ever.

Sharpay thankfully couldn't tell, and stomped off in her fury. _"First Gabriella, and the rest of the wildcats, now some Asian transfer!"_

Kagome tilted her head a bit, glancing over to Ryan who had his eyes closed. _"He looks as if he's meditating himself. Ah..."_ Kagome laughed, "that explains how you deal with her on a day to day basis. Breathing exercises."

He opened his eyes and smiled, "well, yelling at her certainly won't make matters better, or easier to deal with for that matter." He led her to the passenger side of the Golf Cart. "Shall we?" He asked.

She sat down and wondered out loud, hopeful for an answer, "so where exactly _are_ we going?"

A smile was the only answer he gave as he started up the Golf Cart and started off in an unknown direction, and according to the Lava Springs map she'd snagged in the lobby, down an unmarked trail.

Sharpay was nearly growling when she made it to the spa room where she was going to receive a facial and massage. She couldn't figure out why her brother was bothering with the new girl, or why her mother had told her to leave her be, or why her father had brought her to the Inn in the first place. Hell, her whole day was already ruined by the time she left the pool. She had calmed herself down after a few shared words with Ryan, who told her to not think about _Kagome_, the Asian _Queen_ as Fulton had said she was to be treated like.

It took her a good ten minutes to calm down. Then she changed and left to the pool with her brother and of course her girlfriends. She was enjoying the poolside when she saw Troy walk in with his team following behind him, not even caring that the guys had been hired too! It was when she saw Gabriella, his perfect little girlfriend. Then, as if to top her embarrassment, she fell into the pool only to be _saved_ by said girlfriend. Ryan told her to go cool off, or was it _dry_ off?

Whatever he had said, she chose instead to drag him to Fulton, who told her that he'd talked about it with their parents, then dragged him to their mother, demanded answers, and then left him to do Yoga with their loving mother.

"_Today sucks..._" she muttered, sitting in her room drying her hair. "Ryan's off with _her majesty_, Troy's out with Miss. Brains _and_ _Beauty, like you need _both_?" She sneered as she caught sight of her nails, "oh great...my polish chipped..."
